Shanghai and ports on Yangtze River

Whether surveyors' attendance on board is allowed

Some shipyards may allow surveyors to board subject to PCR test reports. In other cases, the surveyors usually are not allowed to attend on board the vessel. If survey on board is very necessary, the attending surveyor needs to be quarantined for at least 10 days after disembarkation, and the surveyor will also charge for survey fee during the quarantine period.

In rare cases, if survey on board is very necessary, subject to Club/Member's confirmation, the survey company may sub-contract semi-official surveyor CCIC to attend on board and guide them to carry out the survey. CCIC has designated teams to attend on board in a normal way and does not need to be quarantined immediately after disembarkation. Such arrangement currently is only available at Changshu Port, Zhangjiagang Port, Taicang Port, Yangzhou Port and Jiangyin Port.

Whether change of Chinese crew members is allowed

Yes.

Whether change of foreign crew members is allowed

Signing off of foreign crew members is possible in Shanghai. Signing off of foreign crew members is not allowed in the ports on Yangtze River.

Latest epidemic control policy on vessels calling the port

Shanghai: The high-risk countries list was cancelled recently. But if the vessel called Indian ports before her calling at Shanghai port, some terminals may demand disinfection and/or even PCR test to crewmembers before cargo operation.

Nanjing: PCR test may be arranged to the crew upon berthing if the vessel had crew change at foreign port within 14 days, or called at any high risk country within 28 days, or will have crew change at Nanjing, or the vessel will proceed to shipyard after departing from Nanjing

Zhenjiang: PCR test may be arranged to the crew upon berthing if the vessel had crew change at foreign port within 14 days or called any high risk country within 21 days, or will have crew change at Zhenjiang, or the vessel will proceed to shipyard after departing from Zhenjiang.

Changzhou: PCR test may be arranged to the crew upon berthing if the vessel had crew change at foreign port within 14 days or called any high risk country within 21 days.

Jiangyin: PCR test may be arranged to the crew upon berthing if the vessel had crew change at foreign port within 14 days or called any high risk country within 21 days.

Nantong: PCR test may be arranged to the crew upon berthing if the vessel had crew change at foreign port within 14 days or called any high risk country within 21 days.

Taicang: The high-risk countries list was cancelled recently. PCR test may be arranged to the crew upon berthing if the vessel had crew change at foreign port within 14 days, or will have crew change at Taicang, or the vessel will proceed to shipyard after departing from Taicang

If there was once positive crew on board the vessel, the vessel is allowed to enter the port after 14 days counting from the day that the crew change has completed; or the vessel can enter the port directly without any waiting, but all the crew on board the vessel needs PCR test before cargo operation. If any positive crew is found on board, the vessel will be ordered to depart directly without any cargo operation.

Changshu: The high-risk countries list was cancelled recently. PCR test may be arranged to the crew upon berthing if the vessel had crew change at foreign port within 14 days, or will have crew change at Changshu, or the vessel will proceed to shipyard after departing from

Changshu

Remarks: Current high risk countries include India, Thailand, Myanmar, Bhutan, Laos, Mongolia, Russia, Cambodia, Nepal, Pakistan and Bangladesh, etc.

Whether positive crewmembers can disembark

For positive Chinese crew members, most ports allow the crew members to disembark, except Taicang Port. If any positive crew is found on board when she calls at Taicang, the vessel will be ordered to depart directly without any cargo operation.

For positive foreign crew members, ports such as Nanjing, Zhangjiagang and Nantong may allow the crew members to disembark for quarantine and treatment. Generally speaking, the decision is made on a case by case basis.

NINGBO

Whether surveyors' attendance on board is allowed

No, except the surveyors who are in the closed circuit quarantine management of the port.

Whether change of Chinese crew members is allowed

Yes.

Whether change of foreign crew members is allowed

No.

Latest epidemic control policy on vessels calling the port

If a vessel has changed crew in a foreign country within 14 days before arrival, PCR tests will be arranged to the crew members who have newly joined the ship. If there is crew member who has recent infection history though tested negative now, or crew member who has shown symptoms of fever or coughing, the customs may arrange PCR test to the crew.

Whether positive crewmembers can disembark

If positive crew members are found on a container ship or bulk ship, the port authorities may refuse the ship to conduct any cargo operation and ask her to sail away for crew change in a foreign port after which she can return for cargo operation. For chemical tankers, if positive crew members are found after berthing, contactless cargo operation may be permitted, but if positive crew members are found before berthing, the ship's berthing application may be rejected.

ZHOUSHAN

Whether surveyors' attendance on board is allowed

No, except the surveyors who are in the closed circuit quarantine management of the port.

Whether change of Chinese crew members is allowed

Yes. It is relatively easy to arrange crew change whilst the vessels are having repairs in the shipyards. For vessels that call for cargo operation, whether crew change can take place largely depend on the berthing arrangement of the terminal and availability of quarantine hotel.

Whether change of foreign crew members is allowed

No.

Latest epidemic control policy on vessels calling the port

If a vessel has changed crew in a foreign country within 14 days before arrival, PCR tests will be arranged to the crew members who have newly joined the ship. If there is crew member who has recent infection history though tested negative now, or crew member who has shown symptoms of fever or coughing, the customs may arrange PCR test to the crew.

Whether positive crewmembers can disembark

If a vessel arrives for ship repair and any positive crew member are detected, the shipyard will coordinate with the local government to arrange the positive crew members to be quarantined in a local hotel, and the ship may only commence repair work after 14 days' quarantine. Furthermore, it is possible that the ship can only depart after the positive crewmembers turned negative and returned to the ship.

If a vessel arrives for cargo operation and positive crew members are detected, the vessel might be asked to sail away by the authorities. In some cases, it may be possible to arrange contactless cargo operation or arrange the positive crewmembers to disembark for quarantine. However, the whole process including cargo operation, application to various authorities and quarantine will take quite long time, and additional claims and costs such as terminal loss of use claims and agency fees etc. will be incurred.
